

300 Standard Tunes - Introduction

This chapter helps you get started with your learning and practicing of 300 standard jazz tunes. It covers these topics:

- About the Standards
- Organization and Road Signs
- Study Hints
- Tune Lists

About the Standards

There are three versions of the standard tunes: for C, Bb, and Eb instruments. If you play a Bb or Eb instrument, see 200 Standards for Bb Instruments or 200 Standards for Eb Instruments. Each chord progression is linked to one or more play-along midi files you can use to practice the standard tune. A sample chord progression is shown below, with descriptions in parentheses.

Blue Moonlight | Ballad | AABA | 3 | Aeb 34, 70 |

Top Line

The top line contains the following information, separated by vertical bars:

| Title | Tune style (ballad, etc.) | Tune form (AABA, etc.) | Difficulty level (1-5) | Play-along CD |

Level 1 is easiest; level 5 is most difficult. The “Aeb” refers to a Aebersold play-along CD; “Sher” refers to a Sher Music play-along CD.

Second Line

The second line of some tunes has links to play-along midi files you can practice with. The numbers refer to metronome markings for quarter-notes. Some tunes also have "Demo" followed by a letter (T for trumpet, S for saxophone, V for vocal). Click the letter to launch a demo solo for that tune.

Organization and Road Signs

For ease of memorization, each tune is printed four bars to a line. 1st and 2nd endings are always aligned vertically with each other so they can be easily found, and codas always begin at the left edge of the page. Space is left so you can write in notes below the tune titles or above or below the tune titles. You can substitute some of your own chords as you become more familiar with the tune.

The road signs in these tunes are indicated as follows:

•/•	Repeat chord(s) in previous bar
	Double bar (end of section)
:	Repeat (to start or to :)
1 ----	First ending
2 ----	Second ending
DC—1e	DC al 1st ending (to start, take 1st ending, start over)
DC—2e	DC al 2nd ending (to start, take 2nd ending, start over)
DC—Coda	DC al Coda (go back to start, take the Coda)
DC—Fin	DC al Fin (go back to start, play until Fin)
(Ø)	Coda sign (jump to Coda)
---- Ø ----	Coda

The chord progressions contain the necessary road signs but, because of copyright restrictions, not the exact tune titles, melodies, or lyrics. You should also get the tune melodies (sheet music or recordings) and learn them. Many of the standards (especially those from film and Broadway) have the chords for the chorus only: the verse is usually omitted. These chord progressions are not guaranteed to be 100% accurate with the originals. In some tunes, embellishing chords have been left out and some chords have been moved from beats 2 and 4 to beats 1 and 3 for easier performance. Also, some standards that were originally ballads are indicated as swing because they are often played as swing today.

Study Hints

The following hints will help you study the standard tunes in this appendix more effectively. Remember that you can study them with or without your instrument. See also Steps for Memorizing Progressions in Chapter 3L: Learning Standard Tunes for ideas on how to study these chord progressions effectively.

- 1) Try the easier tunes first, then the more difficult tunes when you feel confident with your hearing and memorization skills.
- 2) Study the road signs (repeats, DC—Coda, etc.) and note the form of the tune.
- 3) Look for any two-bar or four-bar repetitions of chords in the tune; this lets you memorize fewer chords.
- 4) Find the II-V-I's and their variations in the tune. Recognize when an altered II-V-I takes you into a new key.
- 5) Use ideas from Simplifying Chord Progressions in Chapter 1G: Chords, Keys, and Progressions.
